

Believe, hope, gathering

I believe that in each human being there is a spark of creativity it is a seed that can be dormant but with the right nourishment and environment can turn to be a majestic tree.

I believe that life is too precious to be wasted

I believe there are no good or bad people there is but wrong education

I believe that the 21st century major disease is not cancer or diabetes but loneliness

In every adult there is a curious child it is easier to change and educate children

The next human development lies in community sharing; the individual era is about to end, human beings would have to join forces globally in order to cope with future challenges.

In every human being there is a yearn for warmth, tenderness, to be touched to be hugged to love and be loved

Every human being deserves a moment of attention

Big changes do not manifest at once if we want to change the world for the better we should start with ourselves and our closest relatives and friends if this change is true and genuine more would follow

Inspiration is a contagious energy that can be transferred naturally to open hearts and minds

Obstacles are inevitable In the process of change and growth it's hard to climb on a smooth wall

This is one of the reasons I created the Current art group.

I believe together we can gather on a common cause to make our world a better place.

Have magic in your life

Ted Barr